

Investing in Real Estate: Is it for me?

Considerations Before Investing in Real Estate

By Denise Lones, CSP, MIRM

Before making a large investment such as buying property, one must consider many factors involved in the return that such an investment can bring.

There are several quick and easy tasks that can be done that will ensure that your investment decision is a wise one; one that will bring you the greatest "bang for your buck" as well as the satisfaction of knowing that you put your money to use in helping others as well.

It is only through sharing our wealth that we truly become rich. Hoarding our fortune only serves to diminish its worth, changing it from an energy of unlimited creative potential to a burden that causes us no end of concern.

When we choose to invest in ways that support our community, provide opportunities for others to fulfill their dreams, and protect our natural resources, we gain far more than those who use their money only to increase their power and profit, exploiting the less fortunate and destroying the world that we share with all other living beings.

Conscientious investments create a better environment for everyone. They reduce crime by providing alternatives and hope, not to mention the good example set by the investor. Such investing allows others to make a decent life for themselves.

The community benefits as a whole when the more fortunate invest in schools, parks, non-profit organizations, wilderness preservation, youth groups, support systems for the elderly, and jobs for the disabled. A stable economy is key for any business or community to thrive. Such an economy is characterized by an absence of the very rich and the very poor. A stable economy is one where everyone has a job and the average wage is one that allows for a family to live a good life.

When considering, then, how to invest your money, determine the best ways to create a stable economy, vital community, and a vibrant civil society. The rewards will multiply daily as you see the contented faces of your neighbors and the beauty of the land that sustains us all.
